Drama series based on actual Scotland Yard case files.

Introduced by noted journalist and criminologist Edgar Lustgarten, this early half-hour film series was particularly popular in the USA (where it was known simply as Scotland Yard). It offered dramatized accounts of real-life crimes which had been investigated by the men of the Metropolitan Police. Although casts changed every episode, a few characters like Inspector Duggan (played among other police roles by Russell Napier) appeared on a semi-regular basis. The series was compiled from a collection of cinema second features.

Excitement on a Midwestern railroad in the 1890s.

Based on the mournful ballad in which the hero is tragically killed, this series for youngsters is much more perky. Casey Jones (steamin' and a-rollin') is an engineer for the Midwest and Central Railroad, the man behind the throttle of the celebrated Cannonball Express. Living with his wife, Alice, his young son, Casey Jr, and small dog, Cinders, in Jackson, Tennessee, and loyally supported by his railroad colleagues, Wallie Sims, the fireman, and Red Rock, the conductor, as well as native American friend Sam, Casey somehow always manages to fulfil his missions, in the face of the greatest adversity. This is one Casey Jones who will not die.

CASH, Craig

(1960-)

Manchester-born comic actor and writer, jointly responsible with Caroline Aherne for The Royle Family, in which he played gormless boyfriend Dave. With Aherne he also appeared as Malcolm in Mrs Merton and Malcolm, and made a documentary entitled Back Passage to India. Later, Cash co-wrote (with Phil Mealey) and directed Early Doors (also playing pub regular Joe) and Sunshine (also playing bin man Bob).

CASSIDY, David

(1950-)

Actor/singer heart-throb of the 1970s, soaring to international fame as Keith Partridge in The Partridge Family, in which he starred with his own stepmother, Shirley Jones. On the back of the series he topped the record charts on both sides of the Atlantic with songs like 'How Can I Be Sure' and 'Daydreamer', as well as having Partridge Family hits. Since those heady days TV work has been thin, except for an unusual detective series created specifically for him in 1978, David Cassidy - Man Undercover, in which he played Officer Dan Shay. His earliest work consisted of minor parts in programmes like Bonanza, while more recent guest appearances include a role in Malcolm in the Middle. Cassidy's first wife was actress Kay Lenz. His father was actor Jack Cassidy and his brother, Shaun, has also made showbiz his career and created David's most recent US TV series, Ruby & the Rockits (in which he played David Gallagher).

CASSIDY, Ted

(1932-79)

Giant American actor, chiefly remembered in his guise of Lurch, the groaning butler in The Addams Family. (He also played the hand, Thing, unless Lurch was also in shot.) Later Cassidy appeared as Injun Joe in The New Adventures of Huck Finn and provided the voice for numerous Hanna-Barbera characters, including Frankenstein Jr. He died following heart surgery in 1979.

American actor, an instant hit as Disney's Davy Crockett. Enjoying his American hero status, Parker followed up with tales of another pioneer, Daniel Boone, ten years later. In between he starred as Senator Eugene Smith in Mr Smith Goes to Washington.

PARKER, Nathaniel

(1962- )

English actor, the son of former British Rail chairman the late Sir Peter Parker. Parker's earliest starring roles came in A Piece of Cake ('Flash' Gordon), Never Come Back (Desmond Thane), Catherine Cookson's The Black Candle (Lionel Filmore) and Look at It This Way (Miles Goodall). Although he is best known as the toff detective Thomas Lynley in The Inspector Lynley Mysteries, he has also starred as Gabriel Oak in Far from the Madding Crowd, Dr Dan Gallagher in McCallum, Capt. Rawdon Crawley in Vanity Fair, Andrew Pearce in Trust, Charles II in The Private Life of Samuel Pepys, James in Pretending to be Judith, Harold Skimpole in Bleak House, Albert Speer in Nuremberg: Nazis on Trial, Anthony Troth in A Class Apart, Lord Lawrence Hoxley in Land Girls and Martin Newall in Injustice. ## PARKIN, Leonard

(1929-93)

British reporter and newscaster, with ITN for many years. Initially working as a newspaper journalist in his native Yorkshire, Parkin joined the BBC news team in 1954, later becoming its Canadian and then Washington correspondent. As such, he was the first British reporter to break the news of President Kennedy's assassination. For the BBC, he also worked on Panorama and Twenty-Four Hours. In 1967, the year that News at Ten was launched, he switched to ITN, for whom he also presented election programmes and, later, the lunchtime news (First Report and News at One) and News at 5.45, eventually leaving in 1987.

PARKINSON, Sir Michael

CBE (1935- )

Undoubtedly king of the chat shows in the 1970s, Barnsley-born Michael Parkinson's career began in newspaper journalism, graduating to work for Granada, where he contributed to local news magazines, World in Action, What the Papers Say and Cinema. He then joined the BBC's Twenty-Four Hours team, produced sports documentaries for LWT and ventured into talk shows with Tea Break, before, in 1971, embarking on his 11-year run as host of Parkinson. BBC 1's extremely popular Saturday night series specialized in featuring the biggest names in Hollywood and elsewhere, providing memorable moments such as Muhammad Ali at his verbal best, some classic early exposure for Billy Connolly and, much to the host's displeasure, a rough-and-tumble encounter with Rod Hull's Emu. In 1983 he became one of TV-am's 'Famous Five', largely working on the weekend output, and later sharing the limelight with his wife, Mary. Parkinson has since chaired the quiz and game shows Give Us a Clue, All Star Secrets, Going for a Song and 2000 to 1, worked on The Help Squad, written and narrated the animation The Woolfies, presented a history of rugby league in A League Apart, appeared in Ghostwatch (a Screen One special), and resurrected Parkinson with no little success, finally calling it a day in 2007.

PARSONS, Nicholas

OBE (1928- )

Grantham-born actor and presenter, first seen on TV in guest roles in series like The Adventures of Robin Hood, sketch shows like Look at It This Way and Here and Now, and, more prominently, as stooge to Arthur Haynes, Eric Barker and, later, Benny Hill. At around the same time he was providing the voice for Gerry Anderson's puppet cowboy Tex Tucker in Four Feather Falls, and pursuing a bright career in British film comedies. In the late 1960s Parsons appeared in an American sitcom, The Ugliest Girl in Town, and in the BBC comedy The Very Merry Widow (Francis). More successfully, in the 1970s, Parsons hosted the remarkably popular quiz show Sale of the Century. In the 1990s, he chaired TV versions of his successful radio-series Just a Minute. His has also been a familiar face on other panel games, and Parsons has never been afraid to mock his own smoothie image with cameo roles in The Comic Strip Presents, The New Statesman and other comedies, plus the game shows Ciuedo (Reverend Green) and The Alphabet Quiz. More recently, he took a guest role in Agatha Christie's Marple. His first wife was actress Denise Bryer.

Mel SwopeLife at home and on the road with a family pop group.

When suburban widow Shirley Partridge casually joins her children's band as a singer, little does she know that a career as a pop star beckons. Putting together a song called 'I Think I Love You' in the family's garage-cum-rehearsal-room, the group sells the track to a record company. It becomes a hit and turns the family into top performers. Climbing aboard a painted-up old school bus, Shirley and her kids then head off on tour across America from their home in San Pueblo, California. Apart from Mom, the family consists of 16-year-old Keith, 15-year-old Laurie, freckly Danny, aged ten (who organizes the band), Chris, aged seven, and five-year-old Tracy. Their agent (who dislikes children) is Reuben Kinkaid. The family has a dog called Simone.

Like The Monkees before them, The Partridge Family grew into a real-life pop group and had hits on both sides of the Atlantic. However, they never claimed to perform on the actual recordings, apart from vocals by Shirley Jones and David Cassidy. Their biggest hits in Britain were cover versions of 1960s classics like 'Breaking Up is Hard to Do', 'Looking through the Eyes of Love' and 'Walking in the Rain'. David Cassidy quickly outgrew the series, branching out on his own and becoming one of the 1970s' first teenage idols. Shirley Jones was his real-life stepmother. Cast members Susan Dey, Danny Bonaduce, Brian Forster and Suzanne Crough reprised their roles vocally for animated guest parts in the cartoon series Goober and The Ghost Chasers. There was also a Partridge Family cartoon series set in the future and entitled Partridge Family: 2200 AD. The same four actors contributed, with other actors filling the remaining cast parts.

The Partridge Family was inspired by the experiences of the Cowsills, a Rhode Island family of a mom and her kids who had American hits in the 1960s.

The highly charged back offices of Westminster are filled with back-stabbing researchers and over-ambitious lobbyists – at least if this drama holds true. Party Animals is a This Life-esque tale of determined young people with one eye on their career and the other on an equally competitive social life. At the forefront of the action are brothers Scott and Danny Foster. Scott is a lobbyist, always chasing work that involves pressing the people in power into supporting the latest cause that pays his wages. Danny is more moral, a researcher working for stressed Labour MP Jo Porter, a Home Office junior minister. Jo's opposite number in the Commons is suave Tory James Northcote and his researcher/lover is Ashika Chandiramani who has parliamentary ambitions herself. Also seen is Kirsty MacKenzie, who works alongside Danny and is as much a rival as a colleague/potential girlfriend. Over eight episodes, viewers are exposed to a dog-eat-dog world of sex, sleaze, spite and scandal.
