

the least likely of all men in the world to acquire this title, he did. Elliott was a famous star in his own right, he had the starring role in the Broadway smash, "I Can Get It For You Wholesale".

The marriage had its ups and downs but with the birth of their son Jason, everything seemed to be going well for Barbra and Elliott, then things started to happen to Barbra, movie commitments were coming in from all over, night club engagements were plentiful, wherever she turned she was in demand.

At his time, Elliott's career was also starting to move not in the same manner Barbra's was. He started to appear in movies, he starred in "The Night They Raided Minsky's" and later in "Bob and Carol, Ted and Alice".

It can't be easy for any actor to be married to a superstar. Rumors started to travel that Elliott began gambling for high stakes, he had developed high blood pressure and physical ailments. Inevitably, both Barbra and Elliott decided on a trial separation.

Reports circulated that "Barbra's now a big Hollywood star and she wants to stay in Hollywood. Elliott wants the Broadway Stage. Elliott was offered a big movie role—but the picture would be made in New York."

They separated back in 1968 and have remained so until now. Barbra has gone her own way dating glamorous men from all over the world while Elliott has settled down with an 18 year old girl named Jennifer Bogaert in New York City. Rumors have it that Elliott and Jennifer will soon wed but this again is in the future.

Now Elliott finds himself admiring Barbra as a superb actress and singer but warning any young man who comes into her life that the same fate will happen to them as it did to him, eventually they would become another Mr. Streisand.

Barbra has been number one in the industry since 1963 while Ryan has only been number one for one year. All the fame and glory that Ryan has acquired with the making of "Love Story" has already gone to his head.

He has started to run around as a single man and has not taken into consideration how Leigh and Young Patrick must feel. Leigh has waited patiently for her husband to make number one so that they could enjoy their lives together without the worry of money and now that this time has come Ryan has left her.

We can only hope that Ryan heeds Elliott's warning that a romantic affair with Barbra would not be wise, and that possibly his career would suffer.

No one can match the magnetism that Barbra has over people whether she is on stage, in a club or in a movie and we hope that Ryan realizes this before it is too late for Leigh and him to reconcile their differences, and resume their married life.

SHIRLEY JONES

Quickly, he jotted down the couple's address and slipped the piece of paper into his pocket. The couple sauntered away, talking gaily about how thrilled their daughter would be. Not once did they mention Jack's career or talent. The fact that they had just met
