

SUSAN DEY SAYS:

By Gary Dee

Every week thousands of girls are thrilled as they watch David Cassidy's handsome young face light up their TV screen. David has the kind of easy charm that makes him a favorite for both grandmothers and "teenyboppers." He looks as if he would be fun to date and nice to invite into your home for a piece of chocolate cake and milk.

Loads of girls would swoon at the chance of seeing David every day. They love the idea of hearing his voice in person, not just on anonymous record platters. But there is one girl who does have the opportunity to see David every single working day. Sweet-faced Susan Dey who plays Laurie, David's sister on "The Partridge Family", is probably the recipient of more jealousy than any young girl her age. All over the country girls wish to themselves that they could be in Susan's place.

Although David has talked frankly to the press about his emotional plans for the future and about his personal feelings about his family - especially about the recent brief split-up between Shirley Jones and his step-father Jack Cassidy, Susan is still a mystery girl to the public. She's very busy
