

SPRECHEN SLADE DEUTSCH ?

SLADE have been brushing up their German accent recently ready for their 8-day concert tour of Germany scheduled to start on 17th March. So they'll be able to speak English with a really authentic German accent, instead of their usual distinctive Wolverhampton one!

They won't be letting up on their normal hectic routine in Britain till about a week before they leave. So for all of you who are waiting to know when Slade will be coming your way, they'll be in Preston on 1st March, Warrington on the 3rd, at Bradford University on 4th, Kenilworth on 5th, Wolverhampton on 6th, Hull Technical College on 9th, Cardiff University on 10th and Dagenham on 11th.

Then for the next six days or so, they'll be working on their programme for Germany and – who knows? – they may even manage to grab a couple of hours' rest some time!

AT LONG LAST!

Bell Records are releasing a David Cassidy solo disc!!! In fact, they've gone one better than that . . . they've also got plans for another Cassidy release early in May!

But, first things first . . . Towards the end of this month (exact date still not fixed at time of going to press) "Could It Be For Ever" will be available in the shops, with "Blind Hope" on the flip side. The number to order is BELL 1224 and I guess now's as good a time as any to go round to your local record shop and make sure of your copy – well in advance.

Bell Records thought better of releasing David's single "Cherish" which was – of course – a gold disc in the States. Instead, they will be releasing his ALBUM of the same name . . . so no complaints at all on that score! Watch Superstar News pages for more details nearer the time.

LONESOME SUSAN

Anybody who's flat-hunting At the moment is certainly in good company . . . Because Susan Dey is looking around for an apartment right now too!

Since Jane Joyce moved back East to Framingham, Massachusetts, a couple of months back, Susan's felt just the slightest bit lonesome in the two-bedroomed house they used to share. She's got plenty of friends to keep her company and, of course, she's out an awful lot of the time, but she reckons that a big house like that can feel mighty empty when you're alone in it at night! So Susan's hunting for an apartment within easy reach of Columbia Ranch.

SEEMS like we'll be hearing some new sounds from the Bay City Rollers any time now. One thing's for sure: they've been spending a good deal of time in the studios lately, which looks like a good omen for a new record release soon. They reckon it's really important that they come up with the right sound to follow up their first-disc hit: "Keep On Dancing".

Acting on their own advice about 'keeping on moving' the boys have been travelling round the North of England quite a bit during the last month. They managed to stop off at some music-minded places on the way – like Wolverhampton, Bolton, Leicester and Seahouses (which won't be quite so well known to a lot of you, unless you live round that way, of course!)

For those who don't, Seahouses is a small coastal town in Northumberland fairly close to the Scottish border . . . and the Bay City Rollers met with a great reception when they turned up there towards the end of Feb.

So be on the watch for more news of these six groovy Scots. With looks, talent and youth on their side, they could really up and take the scene by storm.
