

STORY

Actually she's only joking. Because even she says it's been terrific building David up and making him a star. She had managed only actors and actresses before, and David was her first client who was aimed at the younger market.

"I'd never done anything like it before, so while David was learning things, so was I. Some mistakes were made, but that's just the way it goes — everybody makes mistakes.

"But it's fun really most of the time."

LOOKING FORWARD

What happens in David's future?

"Well the biggest thing coming up in the near future is his world tour early next year. It starts in Australia, and on to Japan, then he flies back to the States for a couple of weeks before coming back to Britain, Scotland, Ireland and Europe.

"We're all looking forward to it, and working hard to make it the best ing all the time, because the recording sessions to be done anyway, David wants to be able to make what he does the absolute best.

STAGE ACT

Just now, he's working on a stage act. He's writing new songs. And he wants to bring along the best musicians, not just fair ones. He has spent an awful lot on it, but he hasn't misspent it, because he's got a lot of money.

"But he wants to give the fans what they want, the best show he can possibly give. He's designing a wardrobe for example, and that alone is going to cost thousands of dollars.

"David wants to expand himself as an entertainer, he wants to do more of a production to his stage act. More development of his act. Most of all, he wants to bring his fans along as he matures. He wants that."

we possibly can. One really good thing is that as soon as the Partridge Family TV series finishes at the end of the year, David for the first time will be able to go touring without having to be back in the U.S. within a short while to resume filming the series.

"So you can see it's really silly for people to say that this will be David's last tour, because really this is the first time he'll be able to tour as much as he likes.

"But it doesn't mean he'll be tour-
