

Naked pictures printed

Cassidy fans and parents of young music lovers are protesting the incident.

The publication of half-naked pictures of David Cassidy in the American magazine Rolling Stone caused wide repercussions. Bialar began to rain protest letters to Cassidy and various music newspapers and magazines. David Cassidy was in the process of making a statement regarding the reaction to this incident. Cassidy stated that the accident occurred and apologized to his fans. This is how the incident started and developed Rolling Stone, one of America's leading magazines, had assigned its reporters to do an interview about David Cassidy. Cassidy was caught half naked by the pool by the gazetteers who took pictures of him, Cassidy, who first said what he had done, then allowed his pictures to be taken in various ways. Rolling Stone magazine published it in May... Thus, David Cassidy from "Teenage Idol" Youth Sarcophagus became the subject of sex pictures. While the young people protested this, their parents were also against his records being played, his bathing in the house, and his pictures being plastered on the walls.

Cassidy apologizes

Even after seven months, the backlash continues. David Cassidy was forced to make a statement. Cassidy stated that the incident was not of his own volition, that anyone who entered the pool could be found half naked and apologized to his fans and parents.

Then he told reporters

It cost David Cassidy dearly...