

Darling David,

izing when they're staring at you from hundreds of different places on the wall.

You know, I'd love to have a picture of you when you were small. I bet you were a real little smasher with an appealing face that could persuade anyone to give in to you. Your charm was probably there from the beginning, if only I'd been the little girl next door. We could have climbed trees together and I'd have let you hold my hand as you walked me to my gate.

I just want to say that I'll always love you no matter what you do. You're everything to me and when you sing I can close my eyes and believe every word is for me. What a fantastic discovery I made when I first saw you as Keith in 'The Partridge Family'. I've been following your every move ever since because I just couldn't believe how incredibly good looking you are. My friends felt exactly the same way when they saw you. We all became avid watchers of the series.

Ever since that time I've read every word I've been able to find about you and my collection of your pictures is still rapidly growing. My favourite pin-ups are the ones where you're looking a little dreamy-eyed and your lips are slightly parted. Not that I don't like your lovely smile but the moody look really suits you. I think it's your hazel eyes that attract me so much, they're pretty mesmer-

I know you didn't like the time when you were at school in New Jersey and that's something I can understand. But West Orange sounds such a beautiful place that it's impossible to believe that it could be anything but bliss there. Surely it's full of grass and flowers and no one does anything but drink nectar and pick ripe fruit. Seems not though, your paradise appears to be Hawaii where you're completing your dream house. It sounds out-of-this-world with your modern dome shape and imaginative design. I hope your idea of having it totally self-contained has worked out. How great it would be to live with solar energy and wind generators for power!

Continued on page 14