

Have we seen the last of David Cassidy?

The bright TV spotlights make the journalists uncomfortable. The only one without a sweaty forehead is David, but he is dressed for summer, appropriately enough.

-“This may be the last time I'm in Europe,” he says. Therefore, if you were one of the lucky ones who attended his concerts or met him at the airport, you may have caught your last live glimpse of David.

I've been working very hard over the last few years and need to rest properly. I'm going to start recording my fourth album, and I'm in control of that recording. If you like Cherish and Rock Me Baby, you don't have the same taste as David. He doesn't think they're very good.

Dreams Are Nothing More Than Wishes is the only album I'm completely happy with. It's also the only one I've been able to make my own way. That will be the next one too. It will be a mix of my own songs and other things that I like.

David can't stand the records he made with Partridge Family either. “I can't be bothered to listen to them and don't think they're worth

No one can say of David Cassidy that he does not understand how to manage a success. He's feisty and seems even less so when he's sitting on the couch with a crowd of TV photographers, regular photographers and journalists in front of him. But he's tried that before and answers all the questions frankly. And why can't he take off his sunglasses so the photographers can get pictures of his beautiful eyes? “I can't, I'm not a puppet,” says David.

His skin is tanned by the Californian sun and he shows off his slim legs in a pair of cut-off blue jeans. When he outdoes himself, he can be almost as witty as the Beatles back in the day. A journalist asks him: What do you have that no one else has? - “This cool jacket,” says David, pointing to his flowery torso.

anything. Before I joined the Partridge Family TV show, I was just singing and playing for fun. I didn't make any records before that period. That's why I let myself maybe feel like I was doing something that I didn't really care about. But now it's time for a change David will produce all his own records and concerts. There has been talk for a long time that he will be in a movie, but it won't happen until David has read through lots of my Darling David. This is what a star's thighs look like, and the super-singer is getting a head start on summer in his cropped jeans.
