

mate, Sam Hyman, and got his autograph. Before the show we ate, and when David came on stage we all had our eyes glued on Binoculars. We sang along with him and clapped in time with the music. I enjoyed every moment of David's entertainment. He sang many of his hits.

Hopefully David will come back to perform again. Toward the end when David began to sing, "I think I love you," girls began running closer to the stage just to get a better view. I ran as fast as I could as my bare feet slapped against the ground. I stood about three feet from the stage and watched David sing and dance. As he danced toward where I was standing, I waved my arms more. My legs were shaking because I was so happy and excited. When he saw me he smiled and waved back. I was pretty satisfied with that and so would you have been.

Before he left the stage he threw the towel he wiped his face with, and the cup he drank from.

At the end of each song he made a leaping jump and talked. I appreciated his performance and hope he'll come back.

Mary Goss, an 11-year-old

Hudson Falls, N.Y.

Editor:

I am a fan of David Cassidy. Sunday night, June 27, I went to the Saratoga Performing Arts Center to see David Cassidy. Some friends and I sat at the beginning of the grass. We had a perfect view of David. I think David is very talented and I love all his songs. When he first appeared on the stage everyone including us screamed, waved our arms, and applauded loudly.

At 6:30, my friend, Susan Hafner, and I saw David's room-

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Letters to the Editor on this page speak for their writers and are published as a community service. All letters sent The Post-Star and Times for publication must bear the address and handwritten signature of the writer to receive consideration.

Amateur poetry cannot be accepted for publication.