WILL SUCCESS SPOIL YOUNG DAVID CASSIDY, TV'S NEW SUPERSTAR?

In a review of "The Partridge Family" TV show, Los Angeles TIMES critic Cecil Smith wrote, "One of the worst television years in history could well have produced a superstar — David Cassidy." During an exclusive interview for the October 24 issue of FAMILY WEEKLY, Peer J. Oppenheimer discovered an encouragingly down-to-earth entertainer.

In a world where so many young people are confused, David Cassidy knows where he is, where he hopes to go, what he wants to accomplish.

Cassidy is aware that the popularity-span of a teen-age idol is about two years and that once his "idol cycle" runs out he may be in for a tough time. As for all the attention he's getting now, David says, "I don't really take it all that seriously. I simply can't believe all the stuff that is written about me. It's like it's not me — but someone else. If there's anyone as fantastic as I am supposed to be, I'd like to meet him."
